LARTERITIS - CLERCYMAN'S SORE THYOAT. In approaching the subject of the Laryngmidable character than any hitherto It was from an acute atmek of this mulady, superinduced by exposure to a drens-ching rain, that the Blusterous Washington died, and few indeed, there are, who have been subjects of its ettack, that have not also been its victims. The laryng may be called the head of the

The living may be called the head of the trackes or windpipe, and is situated immediately behind, and descending from the base of the tongue. It is in shape not unlike an inverted cope, the apex being larger than the base, and is composed of four cartileges, held firmly together by ligaments and muscles. It varies in length from and a half to two inches, beginning at the base of the tongue, and extending down be-low the prominence on the nack, (pomum Adam's known as Adam's apple, and has two openings, the upper one of which is called the glotis, situated at the base of the called the glotis, situated at the base of the tongue. This opening is covered by a little sensitive valve, called "epiglottis," which, like a faithful sentinel, on the approach of food or drink, shuts down upon the entrance to the lungs, and allows the nutriment to pass into the stomach, for if the sensitiest portion of solid or fluid obtains access to the windpipe, it excites violent cough and great distress until the effection matter is eleclistress, until the offending matter is ei

About three quarters of an inch below the glottis we have the second sperture, re-bling a slit, called the "rhimo glotidis," sides of which are formed by ligaments known as chorde vocales, or vocal chords, enclosed in a fold of mucuous membrane—
The air we inspire and expire through this aperture in the act of talking, renders these chords vibrative, producing that infinity of tone by which language is made intelligible o express the indwelling thou ht of the

When the larynx is attacked with inflam mation it is called the "Laryngitis," and if the attack is sente in its character the dan death in a few hours. The symptoms char-acterizing this form of the disease are easily distinguished, the patience complaining of sore throat, with an indescribable restlessness and anxiety of countenance. The breathing becomes laborious—almost sterio rious—and there is south difficulty in swallowing. The voice is at first husky, grally becoming more indistinct, until it ties into a low whisper. The horrors of strangulation then commence, the breathing becomes more difficult, the face becomes ivid, the eyes stare and start, an indeser bable sense of oppression or sufficiation is felt, and the patient graspe his throat con-vulsively, as if he would tear the obstruction from it, for he feels that his vital powers are not destroyed by disease, but that he is strangling-dying for want of air, as a man dies who is gradually strangled with a rope and his windpipe closing slowly, slowly slowly—the damps of death now bathe th forehead-the eye grows gradually dim-from every chamber of the brain springs an electric thought or by-gone years, and that this trial is the last of earth. Cases like this make us doplore the immissance of our art, but when we can save ding death, then indeed have we achieved a victory more worthy of monumental renown than all the victories of blood stained sol-diers, who burn cities, and desolate the land diers, who burn cities, and desolate the land by rapine and murder. Cicero says that "nothing brings men nearer the gods than by giving health to their fellow-men."

The physician, to treat this disease, must have no coward spirit. He must be prompt in his decision, and act with enercy. If the usual antiphlogistic treatment fails, then no time should be lost in making the local application, as a lvised by Drs. Belloc and Troasseau, with the probang, and using anodyne and emolient inhalations. This can be done by depressing the tongue so as to elevate the opiglottis, and open the entrance into the larynx. Repeat the operation every few hours, and if unattended with reliaf and the patient is still sinking, then employ the knife and open the windpipe below the the knife and open the windpipe below the seat of disease. The relief in instantaneous, and the effects almost magical, the patient is surprised, and looks around him as if he bud actually arisen from the dead.

By the use of these Bitters All Diseases of the Blood will be thoroughly cradicated, and all those who are suffering from early excess or Prostation of the Physical kinergies, will be restored to a Boomst and tacks, though none can claim exemption from it. It is frequently found among gymen, lecturers, singers, actors and others who make any forensic effort. The disease is sometimes called "clergymen's sore "clergymen's sore throat." As a general thing, however, chron-ic Laryngitis comes on as a sequence to com is Laryngitis comes on as a sequence to con-sumption, superinduced by the matter ex-pectorated from the decaying lungs. This matter, on being thrown from the lungs, ad-heres to, and produces more or less utera-tion about the vocal chords, beginning on the lower sides and gradually extending up-wards. A neglected cold in the head or sore throat are also fruitful causes in produ-cine it for the very obvious reason, that the cing it, for the very obvious reason, that the unhealthy secretion from the head, are constantly dripping into the throat from the posterior mares, producing an irritation which extends rapidly into the larynx, tra-ches, broughi, and finally into the lungs, all of them being connected by the same mem-The treatment depends much upon the The treatment depends—much upon the cause and form of the disease. Where it is secondary to affections of the head or throat to much public speaking, or the use of to-bacco, it is perfectly manageable in a month or two, as all these faulty conditions may be corrected, but medicines taken into the stomach will do no good. When the disease is ach will do no good. When the disease is primary, however, then there is but one sensible course for the patient to pursue, and that consists in the direct application of remedies to the internal surface of the larynx itself, and even this, to premise entire success, must be continued in several months. To make this application the inhalation of vapors is indispensable, as by them we can soothe, astringe, heel or stimulate, the particular parts diseased.
